SENTIMENT AMONG LEADERS

May be Recognized in Appointments to a Tariff Commission-A President's Need ofParty Backing will be Appreciated by

The Philadelphia Press' New York correspondent says:

If the wishes of such representative sound money Democrats as ex-Mayor Grace, Frederic Coudert, ex-Governor Flower, William B. Hornblower, and others of equal prominence, are respected, no tender of any office will mode to any of those Democrats who ranged themselves in opposition to Bryan, nor will any one accept an office should it be offered.

This is, it is safe to say, the almost unanimous opinion of the sound money Democracy of this state, and the leaders of that party assert that, excepting possibly in some of the southern states where conditions are very different from those which prevail elsewhere, there is no likelihood that any sound money Democrat will be found who would be willing to accept office, at least at the beginning of McKinley's administration.

The subject has been carefully dis-administration.

The subject has been carefully as to justify the impression that some reasons have existed for believing that an invitation to accept office under McKinley might be extended to some of those who, as Democrats, Joined in the battle against Beyan.

Mr. Hornblower, for instance, this morning spoke with great earnestness upon this subject. He said that it seemed to him that it would be inexpedient, perhaps very harmful, if any sound money Democrat were to become officially identified with McKinley's administration. The acceptance of office would, in some measure, tend to diministration. The acceptance of office would, in some measure, tend to diminish the respect which the sound money Democracy has everywhere gained for its course in this campaign.

And yet Mr. Hornblower did not mean to intimate that the Democrats who had repudiated the Chicago platform should with the election of McKinley, cease to maintain the relation which it indirectly held with Republicans during the campaign, and should at once become earnest and steadfast opponents of the McKinley administration.

He felt that the occasion might arise in the next year or two, when it may be necessary for all the forces which make for good order and patriotism and the observance of the laws, to standagain in common defense against its saults similar to those which were made during the late campaign.

"But," said Mr. Hornblower, "F am and the observance of the laws, to standagain in common defense against its saults similar to those which were made during the late campaign.

again in common defense against assaults similar to those which were made during the late campaign.

"But," said Mr. Hornblower, "I am more than ever convinced that it is essential that there be reasonable division between men of intelligence, high character and patriotic impulses upon matters of public policy, I confess that I have been told that just now almost all men of that character are upon one side opposing those who followed Bryan to the polls a few days ago.

"But, it ought not to be so. If there be but two parties—one of which is for law and order, and the other for revolution, then sooner or later we shall have revolution or a serious attempt to secure k. For that reason I want to see the Democratic party maintained as an organization, and I mean by the Democratic party those who have been faithful to the real principles of Democracy, and who have not been led away by new things."

new things."

Mr. Hornblower, however, and others of his character realize fully that just at present all of the tendencies on the part of those who are opposed to Bryan are decidedly favorable at least to qualified support of McKinley's administration. A distinguished Democrat who heard what Mr. Hornblower said, well at a big by relating an anecdote heard what Mr. Hornovanancedote ed to him by relating an anerdote omething which had come within own experience, e said that he was once talking nis own experence.

He sold that he was once talking with one of the most distinguished of the leaders of the Irish party in Parliament, and that leader said: The cause of home rule and of Irish reform will. I fear, greatly lag this summer, because the price of young cattle has gone up thirty shillings a head."

And the prediction afterward proved to be an accurate one. So, too, the fear is that if the present promise of prosperity proves to be well founded; if during McKinley's administration there are good times, plenty of work, at good wages, large investments, sufficient revenue, and no financial disturbances, then it will be difficult to persuade many of those who, although bitherto Democrats, voted for McKinley to come back to the Democratic organization.

Moreover, if these conditions of prosperity are realized in McKinley's administration, the chances are that many of the farmers of the agricultural states, who supported Bryan, will be persuaded of their error, and will return to the Republican party.

Ex-Mayor Grace, who was one of these who have the Hornblower's opin-

He said that the election showed that,
with the exception of the silver states and two or three agricultural states in the far west, McKniley had received practically the full support of the Republican party. It would be necessary for him, therefore, to hear that fact in

d. he Republican party had a distinc-The Republican party had a distinctive policy. It received the approval of the great body of Republicans of the great body of Republicans of the Inited States, McKinley, Mr. Grace believed, was a wise enough politician to realize that a President who is to have a successful administration, must have behind him the carnest and cordial support of his party, and it might cost the President some of that support were he to place in high offickal posts men, who claimed to be Democrats and sincere believers in the Indianapolis platform.

sincere believers in the Indianapolis platform.

That platform contained some things with respect to the currency, for instance, to which the Republican party had never been committed as a pacty; and its attitude upon the tariff was emphatically different from the characteristic Republican position.

The sound money Democracy had supported McKinley directly or indirectly because of the great danger to republican institutions, using the word in its larger sense, which the Chicago platform had created.

What McKinley will Do.

What McKinley will Do.

It is the common expression here that it was something more than a chance

It is the common expression here that it was something more than a chance remark which Senator Sherman made at a speech a few days ago, when he was on a visit to this city. He suggested that if there could be temporary relief for the treasury department, such as the passage of the Dingley bill would secure, then the subject of the tariff might be considered by a commission of experts who would treat the tariff as a practical business question, and make report to Congress thereon.

Senator Sherman did not mean that Congress or McKinley's administration should shift the responsibility for a tariff measure to a commission of this kind, and it is understood that he by no means advocated the creation of a commission which would be sure to take a view radically different from that which had characterized the Republican party upon the subject of protection. A tariff commission ought to believe in the principle of protection, and after that it could as a commission of experts so eljust the rates as to allow that principles.

ciple reasonable operation, without imposing unnecessarily high or unfair discriminations.

Those public remarks taken in connection with some things which have been more privately said, have led to the inference that perhaps the best or the least objectionable manner of recognizing th services of the sound money Democracy would be through the appointment upon a tariff commission of men who are of sound money Democracy would be through the appointment upon a tariff commission of men who are of sound money Democratic association, who are qualified by experience and ability to discuss tariff measures and who would give through the commission a fair representation of those who hold the views of the indianapolis platform.

At all events, we are beginning to hear the assertion made with some confidence that if the Congress this winter shall pass a temporary revenue measure, thus avoiding the necessity of an extra session of Congress, that then the new Congress may authorize the President to appoint a tariff commission, which, in the words of Schator Aldrich, may enter upon the task of tariff amendments in a spirit of true conservatism, and with a determination to make the needed changes as soon as possible, and in a manner which will create the least disturbance to business interests.

While it is noticed that there is little

While it is noticed that there is little While it is noticed that there is little disposition now to criticise the administration which is soon to be brought to an end, yet many Democrats do feel free to say that the experiment which Mr. Cleveland undertook of conducting his administration upon those ideal methods which are called "rising above pacty consideration" in part, explains the strength of the Democratic free silver revoit.

So strongly was this disposition manifested by Mr. Cleveland that some of the best friends he had—men who still claim that the final opinion of him will be that he was one of the greatest of American Presidents—neverthetet shrunk from approaching him to gestions.

The belief here is that McKinley fully appreciates what this mistake has cost Mr. Cleveland, and that it is his purpose to listen to all counsels that may be offered by men, who, his judgment tells him, are worth hearing, and to welcome all information that will bring him in touch with the American people and with his party. McKinley is thought here to be a strong believer in pile and with his party. McKinley is thought here to be a strong believer in the necessity and value of sympathetic, earnest and steadfast party support. And while he is far removed from a narrow and bigoted partisanship, he has great faith in party discipline, effective organization, and believes that a successful President must be in one sense the leader of his party. It may be worth while to report so much as this of the feeling which prevails among the conspieuous sound money Democrats of this city and state. The report is a fairly accurate suggest money Democrats of this city and state. The report is a fairly accurate suggestion of that feeling, and it is now clear that the leaders of the sound money Democracy here propose to maintain their organization, not so much with the expectation of immediately restoring to its former commanding position the Democratic party, as in part to be able to hold themselves in readiness to act again in opposition to the herceles of the Chicago platform, if an attenuit act again in opposition to the heresles of the Chicago platform, if an attempt be made to carry the Congress which is to be elected in 1898 for the issues is to be elected in 1898 for the issues which the Chicago platform presents. Then it may be possible to recon-striuct re-organize and build upon the old conservative and traditional prin-ciples of the Democratic party.

A HOME REMEDY

La grippe and influenza, cold in the La grippe and influenza, cold in the head or on the lungs, are not only distressing maladies, but are very dangerous as well. Cold on the chest is an inflamation affecting the air-passages and vesels leading into and through every portion of the lungs. The inflammation may be so violent as to cause death in a short time if not quickly reduced, or it may linger and drag as a bad cold of more or less severity. What is true of a cold is equally true of tagrippe. Even a mild condition is liable to turn quickly into acute pneumonia, or what is worse, salloping consumptions. or what is worse, galloping consump-tion. The breathing tubes become so sensitive that the least exposure, the slightest draught, change of clothing, or slightest draught, change of clothing, or of the weather is sufficient to cause fresh cold, terrible cough, pain and fever. Cough is the foremost symptom, and it may be harsh and dry, or loose and broken with much expectoration. It is always annoying, keeping up a constant irritation and excitement in the sore and inflamed tubes. There is pain and tenderness under the breastbone, sometimes of a raw and tearing nature. Hoarseness, huskiness, whispering, or loss of voice, chilly sensations, sore throat, aching joints and catarch of the head. As the disease advances there are night sweats, heating catarrh of the head. As the disease advances there are night sweats, heetic fever, loss of flesh, spitting of blood or hemerrhage, and the patient has the uppearance and symptoms of consumption. The old way of treating a cold is too well known to need any explanation here; the new way—the beter way—is with Lightning Hot Drons. This remedy is especially valuable in colds, la grippe, influenza, coughs, hourseness, etc. Indeed, for is grippe and influenza it may truly be said to be a specific, while for breaking a cold or relieving hoarseness it is without an equal.

"Oh, you're in too much of a hurry," she replied, banteringly.
Terry pleaded and urged, and the widow laughed. He left the saloen, not a bit discouraged, for he was there again on Saturday. After using all his eloquence for a time he hit upon a plan.
